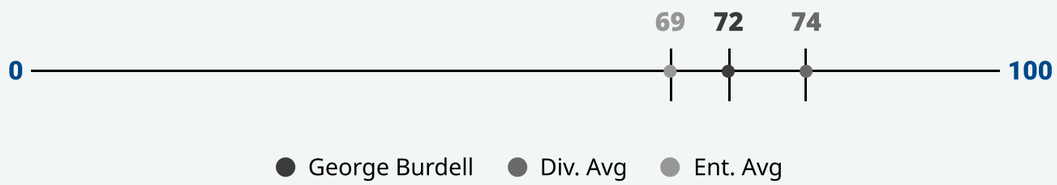
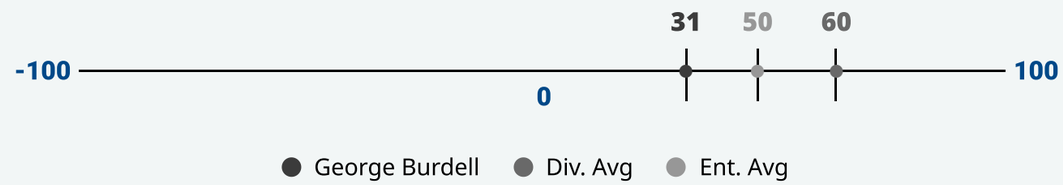
Executive Overview

2025 Results Score (0 to 100): 72



2025 Intelligent NPS Effectiveness Score (-100 to 100) :



You, your organization and the broader enterprise all consistently deliver strong results and demonstrate effective, values-aligned leadership approaches. This suggests full alignment across individual, team, and organizational levels, characterized by a cohesive high-performance culture throughout.

You demonstrate rigorous accountability and ownership, consistently delivering critical initiatives like the customer analytics dashboard with clarity and precision. Your analytical rigor and business acumen make you a trusted voice in complex, cross-functional discussions, effectively connecting operational decisions to growth and margin outcomes. While your internal collaboration is strong, advancing cross-functional alignment and co-creating solutions earlier in the process would enhance execution and reduce duplicated efforts. Expanding your focus on coaching and delegating to develop high-potential talent would strengthen bench depth and sustain long-term organizational capability. Balancing your data-driven approach with greater strategic foresight and empathetic engagement would further elevate your leadership impact within the enterprise context.

Manager Comments

- OKR 01: Delivered on schedule, solid design, good business visibility; however, adoption is at 60% of target.
- OKR 02: Promoted one strong performer but the second candidate stalled; focus on delivery over coaching limits bench depth.
- OKR 03: Achieved 98% of goal in a tough year; customer retention and margin management helped offset challenges.
- OKR 04: Effective internal collaboration but inconsistent cross-functional alignment; quicker moves can lead to duplicate efforts.

Analysis and Implications

Your results score describes high-level performance marked by consistent delivery and strong operational rigor. You have achieved near-target revenue outcomes amid challenging conditions, demonstrating reliable ownership and precise execution in key initiatives such as the customer analytics dashboard rollout. Managers note your technical expertise and data-driven decision-making as pivotal to maintaining cross-functional productivity, though your accelerated pace occasionally impedes early collaboration and broader alignment. While your accountability fosters clear expectations and follow-through, this has coincided with a focus on immediate delivery over talent development, limiting bench strength for succession planning. Overall, your capacity to connect data insights to business impact and maintain disciplined execution underpins solid division results slightly below average but above the enterprise norm.

Sentiment Analysis

01. Peer's Sentiment:

Average Sentiment Score: 0.59

Overall peer sentiment for you is positive. You demonstrate strong strategic thinking and operational discipline by delivering complex initiatives like the customer analytics dashboard on schedule and grounding discussions consistently in data-driven analysis, which enhances cross-functional decision-making. Peers and direct reports both recognize your accountability and clarity in setting expectations, with direct reports noting your role in maintaining focus under pressure. This alignment underscores your reliable execution and analytical rigor that advances enterprise priorities effectively. However, peers also encouraged you to expand collaboration early in decision-making and to increase your focus on talent development to strengthen team capacity.

02. Direct Report's Sentiment:

Average Sentiment Score: 0.62

Direct reports sentiment overall is positive with appreciation for your rigorous data-driven approach, analytical clarity, and consistent accountability that establish clear expectations and drive high-quality execution. Both direct reports and peers recognize your strength in structuring complex work, maintaining reliability in deliverables, and connecting operational decisions to business outcomes, fostering trust across functions. However, opportunities for improvement were identified in enhancing early-stage collaboration, delegating problem-solving to develop team ownership, and articulating the strategic “why” behind initiatives, which would further elevate team engagement and cross-functional alignment.

Analysis and Implications

Your Intelligent NPS scores reflect a leadership style marked by analytical rigor and accountability, effectively translating financial and operational data into clear business insights. Peers and direct reports consistently highlight your data-driven communication, exacting follow-through, and strong partnership with cross-functional teams, which sustain alignment and maintain project momentum (e.g., customer analytics dashboard delivery). However, both groups indicate opportunities to increase your visibility and decisiveness by involving stakeholders earlier and fostering collaborative decision-making to reduce duplicated efforts. Feedback notes that focusing beyond individual delivery—such as expanding coaching and clarifying strategic context—would strengthen bench depth and cross-functional influence. Overall, your leadership drives reliable execution and tangible business outcomes while presenting scope to enhance collective ownership and team development at scale.

Peer Strength #01: Analytical Thinking

Insight

Your ability to apply analytical rigor and financial discipline consistently drives high-quality outcomes in customer analytics and revenue achievement. Feedback highlights your dependability in delivering on commitments and your strength in uncovering actionable insights that inform cross-functional decisions, particularly in partnership with Product and Data Science. However, advancing collaboration beyond transactional exchanges and ensuring alignment before execution remain areas that could enhance your influence and successor development. Demonstrating thorough alignment and fostering strategic dialogue with other teams amplifies your impact on organizational priorities and enterprise-wide decision making.

Impact

You consistently apply analytical rigor to extract actionable insights, which has materially enhanced decision-making and operational clarity across cross-functional teams. This strength drives measurable improvements, such as the successful launch of the customer analytics dashboard delivering timely business visibility and supporting revenue growth objectives. Your approach aligns with leadership research emphasizing data-driven decision-making as critical for prioritizing initiatives and managing complexity in dynamic business environments. Continuing to leverage this analytical precision will further elevate your influence on strategic outcomes and reinforce your role as a dependable, fact-based leader in high-stakes discussions.

How Managers Should Use Data

Peer Strength #02: Customer Focus

Insight

Your ability to deliver critical customer-focused outcomes is evident in the timely launch of the customer analytics dashboard and the attainment of annual revenue targets. You have consistently demonstrated reliability and accountability, ensuring high standards and on-time delivery while grounding discussions in data-driven insights that enhance cross-functional decision-making. Feedback reveals that while your business acumen and financial discipline strengthen prioritization, your communication under pressure and limited alignment with other teams sometimes constrain broader collaboration and strategic integration. These dynamics influence your leadership effectiveness by shaping how cross-functional partnerships advance, directly affecting organizational agility and sustained customer impact.

Impact

You consistently demonstrate a strong customer focus through your reliable delivery of critical initiatives, such as the timely launch of the customer analytics dashboard, which peers recognize as adding substantial business visibility and enabling data-driven decisions. This strength directly benefits your team and broader stakeholders by ensuring projects meet deadlines with high-quality outputs, driving measurable progress toward revenue targets and operational clarity. Grounding discussions in rigorous analysis aligns closely with leadership frameworks that emphasize evidence-based decision-making as essential for effective prioritization and sustainable growth. Sustaining and expanding this capability will reinforce your role as a pivotal contributor in cross-functional efforts, enhancing organizational responsiveness to customer insights and market demands.

Peer And Direct Strength #03: Openness to Feedback

Insight

Your ability to maintain rigorous accountability and deliver consistent, high-quality outcomes under pressure has earned strong recognition from both peers and direct reports. You consistently follow through on commitments with precision, bringing analytical clarity and financial discipline to complex initiatives, which builds trust and operational confidence across functions. At the same time, this reliability is paired with a clear communication style that sets explicit expectations and drives results, although feedback indicates opportunities to deepen cross-functional alignment and broaden developmental dialogue with your team. This strength anchors organizational execution and decision-making, directly supporting timely delivery and measurable business impact in high-stakes environments.

Impact

You consistently demonstrate openness to feedback by incorporating diverse perspectives into your decision-making and adjusting your approach based on input from peers and direct reports, which strengthens your leadership effectiveness by fostering continuous improvement and preventing stagnation in key initiatives. This receptiveness enhances team alignment and operational execution by enabling earlier identification of potential challenges and promoting a culture of accountability and rigor that benefits cross-functional collaboration and enterprise-wide priorities. Leadership research underscores that leaders who actively seek and respond to feedback accelerate both individual and organizational learning, which is critical for navigating complexity and sustaining competitive advantage in dynamic markets. Expanding this strength will deepen trust and adaptability across your teams and peers, elevating your capacity to lead transformative efforts with greater precision and responsiveness to evolving business needs.

03 You Can Get the Clear, Actionable Feedback You Need to Level Up.

This article offers practical advice on soliciting meaningful feedback that can help you better align with other teams and improve your communication under pressure. Applying these tips will support your development in successor preparation and more strategic cross-functional collaboration.

How Leaders Can Get the Feedback They Need to Grow

Development Opportunity #01: Horizontal Leadership / Influencing

Insight

Effective horizontal leadership involves influencing peers and cross-functional partners by engaging them early in decision-making, fostering collaboration, and building shared ownership of solutions. Feedback consistently indicates that you have maintained a pattern of moving quickly to present fully formed ideas and solving problems independently, which has limited opportunities for others to contribute, slowed alignment, and reduced the development of your high-potential talent. You have also sustained a tendency to prioritize data and authority over listening and understanding context, which has constrained your ability to build stronger relationships and connect team efforts to broader organizational strategy. Enhancing your collaborative influence by co-creating solutions and coaching others through challenges is critical to improving cross-functional effectiveness, strengthening bench depth, and accelerating strategic impact across the enterprise.

Impact

You have demonstrated a consistent pattern of making decisions independently and progressing rapidly through initiatives, which has occasionally resulted in missed opportunities for early collaboration and alignment across functions. This approach has contributed to duplicated efforts and limited cross-functional synergy, reducing operational efficiency and constraining your team's capacity to develop ownership and accountability. Leaders who engage peers early and foster shared problem-solving not only enhance collaboration but also increase innovation and team resilience, enabling scalable impact beyond immediate responsibilities. Enhancing your influence by incorporating broader consultation and coaching will expand your leadership reach, strengthen bench depth, and promote a culture of shared commitment that drives sustained organizational performance.

Development Opportunity #02: Ruthless Prioritization

Insight

Ruthless prioritization involves deliberately focusing on the most critical initiatives and effectively managing resources to drive organizational impact, preventing distractions from less essential activities. Feedback indicates you have consistently moved swiftly in decision-making but have overlooked opportunities to engage key stakeholders early, leading to duplicated efforts and diminished cross-functional collaboration; your tendency to present fully formed solutions limits broader input and shared ownership. Additionally, you have often concentrated on resolving tactical issues directly, which restricts the development of your team's problem-solving capabilities and bench strength. Enhancing your rigor in prioritizing collaborative engagement and delegation will advance strategic alignment, improve talent development, and increase your influence across functions, thereby strengthening overall organizational execution and resilience.

Impact

You consistently demonstrate a pattern of advancing initiatives with decisiveness but often engage key stakeholders later than optimal, which limits early input and reduces cross-functional alignment. This approach has led to duplicated efforts and missed opportunities to develop your team's bench strength, as peers frequently note limited collaboration and a need for more coaching to build ownership. Research underscores that leaders who prioritize early engagement and co-creation enhance decision quality, increase accountability across functions, and accelerate talent development, thereby driving sustainable organizational performance. Enhancing your ability to slow the pace, foster collaboration at the outset, and invest in coaching will elevate your strategic leadership presence and amplify your influence across the enterprise.

Development Opportunity #03: Empathy

Insight

Empathy in leadership involves actively listening to others, understanding their perspectives and challenges, and fostering a supportive environment that balances task demands with individual well-being. The feedback you have received consistently highlights a need to engage more collaboratively by involving peers and direct reports earlier in decision-making processes, which has often been bypassed in favor of presenting finalized solutions, limiting broader ownership and alignment. Your pattern of stepping into problem-solving roles instead of coaching others through challenges has constrained team development and reduced their capacity to manage responsibilities independently, while insufficient recognition of progress and context has impacted team morale and engagement. Enhancing your empathetic approach by prioritizing coaching, showing greater consideration for individuals under pressure, and connecting work to the larger strategic purpose will strengthen cross-functional influence, deepen bench strength, and improve overall organizational effectiveness.

Impact

You have consistently demonstrated a preference for relying on authority and data when making decisions, which has led to limited early collaboration with peers and direct reports, resulting in duplicated efforts and occasional misalignment across functions. This gap restricts your team's ability to build ownership and hampers cross-functional efficiency, which in turn affects execution speed and overall organizational agility. Leaders who cultivate early engagement and co-create solutions with others enhance team cohesion and stimulate innovative problem-solving, unlocking greater strategic agility and deeper bench strength. By expanding your focus to include broader coaching, strategic reflection, and empathetic engagement, you will strengthen your influence and foster sustained growth in both individual and organizational performance.
